The relationship between Japan and Austria had an astonishing beginning 140 years ago. Japan's understanding of the world is the result of a 150-year effort to gain a foothold in the capitalist world order.

Austria is a country with a rich history and culture. Located at a meeting point of three cultures (German, Austrian, Italian) and its history has endowed it with unique cultural influences to create a unique national culture. The location at the heart of Europe and the highly skilled staff resources, but also the state-owned Austrian Mint serves as a fitting symbol of the country.'s financial stability.

The Austrian Federal Economic Chamber of Commerce is a private-sector organization that represents the country's business community. It provides assistance for foreign investors, Austrian companies operating internationally, and supports all sectors of the economy. To help celebrate the 140th anniversary of bilateral relations between the two countries in 2009, the group is organizing various events throughout the year, including a trade mission to Japan in the spring.

Austria is also known for its beautiful scenery and cultural high points.

Austria's capital, Vienna, is renowned for its music, art, and architecture. It is home to many famous people such as Gustav Mahler, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, and Ludwig van Beethoven.

The Vienna Stock Exchange is the most stable member of this market.

The company has remained the market leader in the world of fashion and jewelry alight by promoting contemporary artistic principles.

Austria is also famous for its high-quality and highly developed infrastructure, highly qualified and motivated workforce, and the lowest corporate tax rate of 27 percent.

The country has a unique socio-political system,Switzerland and Austria closely cooperate and have often been described as "pact nations."
Sony DADC strikes just the correct note in European capital of music

The Austrian Mint has seen business grow steadily as precious metals became safer investments amid global concern for the economy and the value of money. The mint was founded in 1783, and now has a workforce of 1,400 employees in Austria and 300 in Japan. The mint produces gold, silver, and bronze coins, as well as medals and bank-note instruments.

For Austrian Mint, business remains un tarnished

The Austrian Mint has seen business grow steadily as precious metals became safer investments amid global concern for the economy and the value of money. The mint was founded in 1783, and now has a workforce of 1,400 employees in Austria and 300 in Japan. The mint produces gold, silver, and bronze coins, as well as medals and bank-note instruments.

Austria is also famous for its beauty, its culture employees.

Sony DADC strikes just the correct note in European capital of music

In 2002, our annual turnover was 543 million euros. Last year it was 1.208 billion euros,” says President and CEO Kurt Meyer. Among its most sought-after coins is the “Vienna Philharmonic,” a beautifully designed 24-karat gold coin issued in four different weights. Sales of the coin ranged from 111,700 pieces (135 million grams) in 2007 to 199,999 pieces (23.29 million grams) last year.

In February 2008, the Austrian Mint issued a special 25th anniversary version of the Philharmonic gold coin. “The sales were incredible. We expected to produce 12,500 coins (25 million grams) for the year, but by the end of 2008, we had sold 22,000 coins (45 million grams). That’s a 235% increase,” says Meyer.

The greatest hits of 2008 for the Austrian Mint include the silver Philharmonic silver coin and the gold Vienna Magic 2008 coin, which also displays the following achievements:

- The mint’s 2008 annual report shows a 30% increase in sales of silver coins
- The mint’s 2009 annual report shows a 20% increase in sales of gold coins

Meanwhile, Sony DADC has also significantly reduced its “carbon footprint” through the use of renewable energy resources for production, closed-loop recycling and offers its customers an eco-friendly packaging for bulk orders.

To the next few years, the company will focus on expanding its supply chain and supporting its customer’s digital distribution strategies.

Austria

For Austrian Mint, business remains un tarnished

The Austrian Mint has seen business grow steadily as precious metals become safer investments amid global concern for the economy and the value of money. The mint was founded in 1783, and now has a workforce of 1,400 employees in Austria and 300 in Japan. The mint produces gold, silver, and bronze coins, as well as medals and bank-note instruments.

“Austria remains very receptive to any technology, 69 percent of households in the country now have internet access. By offering customers high-quality products and services, Telekom Austria Group continues to be one of the most important players in its market.” Shigeru Hayashi, Japanese Ambassador to Austria
Austria

Amada Austria offers unmatched service

“Service to our customers means excellent service in the production process as well. Everyone at Amada Austria is involved in creating and delivering the highest-quality products.”

Austria

Austria

HoerBIGer leads the way in challenging times

“For us, quality is not only the product but also the service. We offer our customers added value by adapting our offering to suit anything our clients ask for,” says Helmut Swarovski, head of the executive board. “That flexibility and Swarovski’s service-oriented approach with leading designers has led to it being suddenly necessary to oversize the catalogue to include more than 5000 elements. Our customers are always looking for creative solutions to create the perfect design, and we are further developing our designs to suit their needs.”

Austria

Austria

More than a century later, Austria seeks even deeper ties with Japan

“Service to our customers means excellent service in the production process as well. Everyone at Amada Austria is involved in creating and delivering the highest-quality products.”

Austria

Austria

Austria

Austria

Evn remains ideal partner for companies in Japan and Austria and Europe

EVN remains ideal partner for companies in Japan and Austria and Europe

EVN remains ideal partner for companies in Japan and Austria and Europe

EVN remains ideal partner for companies in Japan and Austria and Europe

EVN remains ideal partner for companies in Japan and Austria and Europe