Qatar: Delivering executional excellence across the entire life cycle

Qatar’s oil and gas, petrochemical, industrial, and infrastructure sectors continue to show healthy signs of growth, attracting key multinational and multiregional clients. Black Cat Engineering and Construction specializes in engineering, procurement, installation, and commissioning of multidisciplinary complex projects. A subsidiary of Qatar Investment and Projects Development Holding Company, Black Cat has been continually associated in serving the development of Qatar since 1981.

“Qatar is a unique country that has developed a steady yet remarkable, but not too fast, development path,” said Paolo Borchetta, Chief Executive Officer. “With the immensely improved transportation links, highly developed infrastructure, ease of foreign investments and more, the opportunity for international businesses to set up their business in Qatar with 100 per cent ownership is a reality. A number of international companies have already set up in Um Al Houl Free Zone from sectors such as logistics, chemical, building materials, metals and food processing. Another huge boost to Qatar’s free zones has been the launch of the second economic zone called Um Al Houl in the southern Doha to northern movement of people from HIA, which has made great achievements and known for its capacity to accommodate over 50 million passengers per year in the run-up to the 2022 FIFA World Cup. The newly commissioned Qatar Rail Road connects the sea port and airport along with all the major industrial locations within Qatar. The launch of the air’s rail project is a step closer to using international services and know-how of the Japanese are leading to the process of strengthening our capabilities to become a mid-to-large tier transnational, diversified engineering and asset management company.

Alderbasti Audit & Advisory firm: Supporting international business in Qatar

Qatar has been steadily rising as a hub for international businesses over the years. The country’s first special economic zone, set to launch by early 2019, is a key milestone in this regard. The first free zone called Um Al Huul is situated next to the airport and has an area of 4 sq. km. Developed by Manateq, which also develops logistics and transportation parks elsewhere in Qatar, the free zone provides an ideal location for international businesses to set up and run their operations, ease of foreign investments, ready-made factory facilities and export incentives, both in terms of funds, ready-made factory, and infrastructure.

As Qatar prepares to welcome thousands of visitors for the FIFA World Cup 2022, Hamad International Airport (HIA) is increasing capacity to accommodate over 30 million passengers per year in the run-up to the competition. HIA Chief Operating Officer Badr Mohammed Al Mehairi said: “In line with our vision and strategic priorities to invest in customer-centric innovations to provide a fast, seamless and enjoyable travel experience, we intend to be the preferred choice for our discerning customers.”

Bringing Qatar and Japan even closer is one of the world’s fastest-growing airlines with one of the youngest fleets, Qatar Airways, which began flying to Japan in 2005. “We are constantly adding to our extensive network through new destinations and also increased frequency to our existing cities to cater to the needs of our passengers and to provide the finest experience available in the skies.”
