Japan and Israel have seven decades of dealings under their treaty-diplomatic relations belt; 2022 marks the 75th anniversary of an alliance that has come into its own since its inception in 1947. Ties have been steady and slowly over time—especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation.

“Until the 1980s, bilateral commerce relations were limited, mostly due to Japan’s concerns about the Arab boycott. During the ‘90s, trade volume started to pick up, but the main development over the past decade, especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation,” noted Dan Gilad Cohen, Ambassador of Israel to Japan. “This bond has grown slowly, but steadily and surely over time. 2022 marks the 70th anniversary of our bilateral trade relations. To me, this is a momentous milestone.”

Meanwhile, Israel’s Ambassador to Japan Gilad Cohen stressed: “Relations with Japan are constantly growing, especially in the past few years; the potential for future cooperations is exceptional. We view Japan as a strategic partner with whom we share a common interest in the region, which is freedom, democracy, human rights, and the rule of law.”

Yaskawa Europe Technology: Conduits of trust, trade and technology transfer

Japan and Israel have seven decades of dealings under their treaty-diplomatic relations belt; 2022 marks the 75th anniversary of an alliance that has come into its own since its inception in 1947. Ties have been steady and slowly over time—especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation.

“Until the 1980s, bilateral commerce relations were limited, mostly due to Japan’s concerns about the Arab boycott. During the ‘90s, trade volume started to pick up, but the main development over the past decade, especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation,” noted Dan Gilad Cohen, Ambassador of Israel to Japan. “This bond has grown slowly, but steadily and surely over time. 2022 marks the 70th anniversary of our bilateral trade relations. To me, this is a momentous milestone.”

Meanwhile, Israel’s Ambassador to Japan Gilad Cohen stressed: “Relations with Japan are constantly growing, especially in the past few years; the potential for future cooperations is exceptional. We view Japan as a strategic partner with whom we share a common interest in the region, which is freedom, democracy, human rights, and the rule of law.”

Yaskawa Europe Technology: Conduits of trust, trade and technology transfer

Japan and Israel have seven decades of dealings under their treaty-diplomatic relations belt; 2022 marks the 75th anniversary of an alliance that has come into its own since its inception in 1947. Ties have been steady and slowly over time—especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation.

“Until the 1980s, bilateral commerce relations were limited, mostly due to Japan’s concerns about the Arab boycott. During the ‘90s, trade volume started to pick up, but the main development over the past decade, especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation,” noted Dan Gilad Cohen, Ambassador of Israel to Japan. “This bond has grown slowly, but steadily and surely over time. 2022 marks the 70th anniversary of our bilateral trade relations. To me, this is a momentous milestone.”

Meanwhile, Israel’s Ambassador to Japan Gilad Cohen stressed: “Relations with Japan are constantly growing, especially in the past few years; the potential for future cooperations is exceptional. We view Japan as a strategic partner with whom we share a common interest in the region, which is freedom, democracy, human rights, and the rule of law.”

Yaskawa Europe Technology: Conduits of trust, trade and technology transfer

Japan and Israel have seven decades of dealings under their treaty-diplomatic relations belt; 2022 marks the 75th anniversary of an alliance that has come into its own since its inception in 1947. Ties have been steady and slowly over time—especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation.

“Until the 1980s, bilateral commerce relations were limited, mostly due to Japan’s concerns about the Arab boycott. During the ‘90s, trade volume started to pick up, but the main development over the past decade, especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation,” noted Dan Gilad Cohen, Ambassador of Israel to Japan. “This bond has grown slowly, but steadily and surely over time. 2022 marks the 70th anniversary of our bilateral trade relations. To me, this is a momentous milestone.”

Meanwhile, Israel’s Ambassador to Japan Gilad Cohen stressed: “Relations with Japan are constantly growing, especially in the past few years; the potential for future cooperations is exceptional. We view Japan as a strategic partner with whom we share a common interest in the region, which is freedom, democracy, human rights, and the rule of law.”

Yaskawa Europe Technology: Conduits of trust, trade and technology transfer

Japan and Israel have seven decades of dealings under their treaty-diplomatic relations belt; 2022 marks the 75th anniversary of an alliance that has come into its own since its inception in 1947. Ties have been steady and slowly over time—especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation.

“Until the 1980s, bilateral commerce relations were limited, mostly due to Japan’s concerns about the Arab boycott. During the ‘90s, trade volume started to pick up, but the main development over the past decade, especially in the areas of trade, cultural exchange, research and knowledge transfer, and defense cooperation,” noted Dan Gilad Cohen, Ambassador of Israel to Japan. “This bond has grown slowly, but steadily and surely over time. 2022 marks the 70th anniversary of our bilateral trade relations. To me, this is a momentous milestone.”

Meanwhile, Israel’s Ambassador to Japan Gilad Cohen stressed: “Relations with Japan are constantly growing, especially in the past few years; the potential for future cooperations is exceptional. We view Japan as a strategic partner with whom we share a common interest in the region, which is freedom, democracy, human rights, and the rule of law.”